A SAD DISAPPOINTMENT.

Our esteemed contemporary, the Congressional Record, has disappointed us so deeply that we fear the Christmas festivities will be for us a hollow mockery. For some days we have been looking forward to receiving the Record of Dec. 18, the day on which Congressman Lamar of Florida and Shackelford of Missouri had their tilt with Leader Williams. The outline furnished by the Associated Press of the conflict between these gentlemen promised some interesting reading when the full report came to hand.

Well, the Record arrived yesterday. We opened it with anticipation of a rhetorical feast. Alas, this is what we found:

"(Mr. LAMAR addressed the committee. His remarks will appear hereafter.)"

"(Mr. WILLIAMS addressed the committee. His remarks will appear hereafter.)"

The blow was a serious one, but we read on in the hope that Mr. Shackelford's remarks would in some measure afford compensation. Alas, the hope was not well founded. Says the Record:

"(Mr. SHACKLEFORD addressed the committee. His remarks will appear hereafter.)"

"(Mr. WILLIAMS addressed the committee. His remarks will appear hereafter.)"

In an old poem these lines occur: "Boys flying kites haul in their white-winged birds; You can't do that when you're flying words."

And further along there is a statement in effect that God himself can't kill a word that has been said. Now we move to amend by inserting the words, "unless the man who says it happens to be a member of congress and the word is spoken before the committee of the whole or in regular session."

The Herald has heretofore complained of the lack of accuracy in the esteemed Congressional Record, a journal that should above all things be absolutely accurate. The statements made by Messrs. Williams, Lamar and Shackelford were made before the house in committee of the whole. Every word they spoke was taken down by an official stenographer. Yet it is perfectly obvious that the reason they do not appear in the Record of the date on which they were uttered is that their authors wish to revise them.

WHITE HOUSE WEDDINGS.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Alice Roosevelt to Congressman Longworth of Ohio, and that the wedding is to occur in February next, is of more than ordinary interest. It is not often that the daughter of a president is married in the White House. Weddings of any description in that historic mansion have been extremely rare. The ceremony that will make Miss Roosevelt the wife of Mr. Longworth will be the first in the White House since 1856, when President Grover Cleveland married Miss Frances Folsom.

The first marriage ceremony performed in the White House took place in President Madison's second term, when Robert Todd, son of Mrs. Madison by a former husband, was the groom. In 1829 President Monroe's daughter was married in the White House to one of the Livingstons. Then came an interval of many years without a ceremony in the executive mansion. Not until 1874, indeed, when Miss Nellie Grant, daughter of President C. Grant, became the bride of Captain Algernon Sartoris, did the wedding bells ring again.

As will be seen, Miss Roosevelt will be the third president's daughter to wed in the White House in all the history of the republic, a period of nearly 130 years, dating from the Declaration of Independence. Other presidents have had daughters of marriageable age, but they waited until after their fathers' terms expired before being united to the men of their choice.

There is reason enough for the scarcity of White House weddings. Though we try to believe otherwise, there is a sort of divinity that hedges about the chief magistracy. The wooer must be bold indeed who goes in and wins the prize.

This same Miss Roosevelt will certainly have an interesting girlhood to look back upon. She has had experiences such as come to but few young women in this country, or in any other. And through all of them, if she has been correctly reported, she has conducted herself as a sensible American girl should. The nation will wish for her as full a measure of happiness when she leaves the White House as Mrs. Longworth as she has apparently enjoyed as Miss Roosevelt, daughter of the president.

THE OLD KENTUCKY HOME.

Kentucky is preparing to welcome back to "the old Kentucky home" the sons and daughters who have wandered far from their native state. In Louisville next June the clans are expected to gather from the uttermost parts of the earth to renew old acquaintanceships and friendships, to feel again the warmth of the hospitality they have lacked so long, to pick up threads that were broken perhaps years before. Louisville was selected as the meeting place because it is the easiest of access, but the celebration is to be participated in by the entire state.

Every county is to have headquarters there, so that all who go will find somebody from the old home to welcome them, to make them glad that they are Kentuckians, glad that a blessed privilege has been given them. The thought is a mighty pretty one, and doubtless all former Kentuckians who can possibly avail themselves of the opportunity will be in Louisville during the second week in June of 1906. Certainly those who do go will not regret their experience.

The first day there will be a great reception, at which speeches will be made by Henry Watterson, former Vice President Stevenson, former Governor Francis and Crittenden of Missouri, former Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle, Associate Justice John M. Harlan of the supreme court of the United States, and others. The second day has been set apart for the honoring of the memory of Stephen Foster, author of that classic, "My Old Kentucky Home." A number of bands are to be massed to lead a chorus of several thousand voices in the singing of this song.

"Daniel Boone day" comes next, with old fashioned games in the parks of Louisville. On Saturday, June 16, the programme includes a great barbecue and burgoo feast, dear to the hearts of all Kentuckians, but especially dear to the hearts of those to whom such feasts are now only a delightful memory. Sunday there will be sermons by Kentuckians who are now preaching in other commonwealths, and the singing of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

A FOOLISH REMARK.

Some weeks ago the Rev. George Chalmers Richmond, curate of St. John's Episcopal church at Stamford, Conn., made, during the course of a sermon, the statement that any man who accepts a salary of as much as $25,000 a year is a thief. There was no qualification of the remark. The statement was made baldly and boldly, that no man who receives $25,000 a year or more for his services can be an honest man.

The outcome has been the dismissal of Mr. Richmond. He and his friends say he was discharged because his statement aroused the ire of some of the wealthy members of his congregation. The rector says Mr. Richmond was dismissed because his services were unsatisfactory. If the rector had admitted that Mr. Richmond's rash assertion was the cause of his dismissal, as it probably was, there would not have been a great deal of criticism.

Mr. Richmond spoke very rashly indeed. There are plenty of men in the United States who earn $25,000 a year as honestly as the horny-handed son of toil who earns his $2.50 or $3 a day. They are worth the salary they receive just as surely as the clerk who draws $10 or $15 a week. The president of the United States receives $50,000 a year. Surely Mr. Richmond would not believe Mr. Roosevelt is a thief. It is quite true that many men would be willing to take the presidency for considerably less money, even for nothing a year, but that doesn't make Mr. Roosevelt a thief.

Exceptional talent in the world of business is entitled to and should receive exceptional recognition, exceptional rewards. We have, and in this we may be unfortunate, devised no better way of recognizing great talent than by rewarding it with money. While some of our ablest men have not received such rewards, it will be found, as a rule, that they were not men of business, that their talents were occupied in fields of science or in the service of their country.

The Herald believes that men who are worth big salaries should be paid big salaries. Plenty of men who are working for large corporations and receiving salaries of upwards of $25,000 a year could earn very much more outside of the corporation service.

Mr. Richmond is clearly in the wrong. If the remark we have quoted is a fair sample of his usual utterances it is a wonder he was not dismissed long ago.

There have been eighty-three new national banks chartered in Ohio during the past year, which goes to show that the departure of Mrs. Cassie Chadwick from the Buckeye financial field has opened the door of opportunity to many other ambitious ones.

Doesn't it beat all how the advertising comes to people who don't need the advertising. The average chorus girl would give a lot for a small part of the publicity that Mr. Ryan and Mr. Harriman have been getting lately.

The New York Times in somewhat belated comment on President Roosevelt's last message of 26,000 words, suggests it is a good thing the president didn't send it to congress collect.

Looks as if the weather man made a note of our request for snow for Christmas. It didn't, but the shopping, either. Nothing is permitted to interfere with Christmas shopping.
